A 7-year-old boy was handcuffed by police at P.S. X114 in the Bronx on Dec. 4, according to a $250 million lawsuit filed against the city and the NYPD. Frances Mendez said her son, Wilson Reyes, was "interrogated" for 10 hours by police, the NY Post reported, after being falsely accused of stealing $5 from another child at the school. Another boy has come forward to accuse Reyes of being a violent bully. ● METRO/DT

Use caution behind the computer screen

"If you're connecting with somebody in the online world, unless you are seeing the whites of their eyes, they should be treated as a stranger to you," Nigam said.

Instead, he said, when people talk online, they can feel very comfortable because they are in the safety of their own home. But people should have the opposite reaction. If something seems off, ask for clarification, he advised.

"I think your first best friend in all of this is Google," he said. "You can see if the job they're talking about actually exists. ... If your instincts say there's something wrong, you've got to go with it." He also suggests a face-to-face chat on the computer or phone. "If the person refuses because they're giving you examples like, 'My hair doesn't look good today, I'm just not feeling well,' your senses should go up," he said. If you do meet someone, perhaps through an online dating website, make sure it is in a public place, and consider having a friend show up two or three tables down or suggesting a group setting.

Meanwhile, the family of a Staten Island woman, Sarai Sierra, is searching for her in Turkey, where she disappeared while traveling this month.

They, too, are concerned she may have met someone online. She had planned to meet with strangers she met through Instagram, according to the Daily News.

Online safety expert Hemu Nigam said that when people sit behind a computer screen, they may wrongly lower their guard.

"When you're going online, it's very much like you're going down a New York alley," he said. "You don't know where you're going, you don't know what might pop up. ... Yet when you're on a computer, you do it without thinking twice."

Police are searching for a suspect they think may have murdered a Queens teacher after they met online.

David Rangel, 53, was found choked to death and shoved under his couch in his Jackson Heights apartment Sunday, officials said.

A police spokesman said cops responded to a 911 call, after a friend checking on him found the door unlocked and ajar.

Police found Rangel with trauma to his head as well as blood on the floor and the walls.

Councilman Daniel Dromm asked the NYPD yesterday to investigate the murder as a hate crime.

"The horrific crime committed against David Rangel, an openly gay public school teacher who lived in one of the city's most tolerant communities, is deeply distressing," Dromm said.

Dromm spokesman Alex Florez said Rangel appears to have met someone online. The councilman's concern is that someone may have targeted him because he is openly gay and that this perhaps led to a potential bias-motivated murder.

"Something obviously went terribly wrong there," Florez said.

Cuomo threatens to force teacher evaluation deal

Gov. ## Police search for child predator

Cops are searching for a man officials say has been trying to lure children toward his car.

Councilwoman Julissa Ferreras said that a man tried to lure a child two times recently in her East Elmhurst community.

"He is a predator on the loose and has now tried multiple times to harm young women in our community," she said.

Police said that on Friday around 7 a.m., a Hispanic male, 30 to 35, in a Cadillac Escalade drove by a 13-year-old girl on Northern Boulevard. He engaged her in a conversation, cops said, and she walked away. The man got out and grabbed her arm as she walked away. The girl fled.

The man is described as Hispanic, light-skinned, 5-foot-7 to 5-foot-9, 170 pounds.

The same day, cops said, around 8 p.m., a man in the same type of car drove alongside a 14-year-old girl, again on Northern Boulevard.

He motioned her to approach the vehicle, but she would not. This girl fled as well, cops said.

Time Warner asks brokers for value of NY headquarters

Time Warner Inc. is considering selling its New York headquarters and has asked real estate brokers to evaluate the building's value, according to two sources familiar with the situation.

The company is considering a wide range of options, including selling the Midtown Manhattan building and leasing it back, moving more employees into the building and closing other New York offices, or moving out from the building entirely, one source said on Wednesday.

Time Warner owns or occupies space in 15 buildings in the New York metropolitan area, with 10 in Manhattan, the source said.

The company has been evaluating its real estate needs for at least a year and hopes to finalize a plan by the end of 2013.

The Time Warner Center is easily recognized by its two towers that include residential condominiums, the Mandarin Oriental Hotel and a shopping mall. REUTERS

From Shen Yun Performing Arts

MYSTERIOUS. PROFOUND. ENLIGHTENING. Traditional Chinese culture is a remarkable well-spring of knowledge and experiences. The Chinese New Year, which falls on February 10th this year, often affords us a small glimpse of this culture, but for most of us, the true treasures it contains remain elusive...until now.

Shen Yun offers audiences a mesmerizing performance where the virtues of ancient China, the world's finest dancers, a unique East-West orchestra, and dazzling animated backdrops converge to take you on a spectacular journey through 5,000 years of divinely-inspired culture. Quite simply, this is traditional Chinese culture in its most authentic and exquisite form. A Shen Yun performance not only delights, but more broadly, educates, enriches, and inspires.

A Mesmerizing Journey through 5,000 Years of Chinese Civilization

Every year, Shen Yun unveils an entirely new lineup of dances, songs, and musical scores. At the core of Shen Yun's performances is classical Chinese dance with China's numerous ethnic and folk dance styles rounding out the evening.

In a collection of short pieces, audiences travel from the Himalayas to tropical lake-filled regions, from the legends of the culture's creation over 5,000 years ago to the story of Falun Dafa in China today, from the highest heavens down to the dusty plateaus of the Middle Kingdom.

ALMOST LOST, TREASURE OF HUMANKIND REVIVED IN NEW YORK

Shen Yun cannot be seen in China today, where traditional culture has been mostly destroyed under communist rule. Yet, Shen Yun has become a global cultural sensation bringing the virtues and wisdom of traditional Chinese culture to millions of people across four continents.

"It was an extraordinary experience... the level of skill, but also the power of the archetypes and the narratives were startling. It was exquisitely beautiful."

► A payroll tax cut expired on Jan. 1, and big automatic spending cuts are set to take hold in March unless Congress acts.

Surprise downturn in the US economy

The economy unexpectedly contracted in the fourth quarter, but analysts said there was no reason for panic given that consumer spending and business investment picked up.

Gross domestic product fell at a 0.1 percent annual rate, its weakest performance since it emerged from recession in 2009, the Commerce Department said on Wednesday.

If it were not for the hit from slower inventory growth and the deepest plunge in defense spending in 40 years, the economy would have grown at a respectable 2.5 percent rate.

"Obviously, the headline number is a bit jarring, but the underlying details of the report, by and large, are consistent with an economy that is growing probably at a trend basis of about 2 percent," Michael Hanson, a senior economist at Bank of America Merrill Lynch

Another report

- A second report from payroll processor ADP showed private-sector payrolls expanded by 192,000 jobs in January after increasing 185,000 in December.
- Faster employment growth could help the economy to weather the headwind of higher taxes and possible spending cuts this year.

in New York.

Economists polled by Reuters had expected GDP to rise at a 1.1 percent rate and none had predicted a contraction.

U.S. financial markets largely shrugged off the data, heartened by the acceleration in consumer spending and the rebound in business investment, which pointed to some fundamental economic strength. REUTERS

Inventory drag

The economy was slammed by superstorm Sandy in late October, which caused extensive damage along the East Coast.

The Commerce Department estimated the damage from the storm at about $44.4 billion. Economists said that could have cut around 0.5 percentage point off fourth-quarter growth.

The recovery also had to deal with uncertainty over the so-called fiscal cliff of scheduled tax hikes and budget cuts, which hurt confidence even though households and businesses seemed to largely shrug off the worries.

WASHINGTON. Former congresswoman Gabby Giffords, grievously wounded in a 2011 mass shooting, Speaking haltingly, Giffords urged lawmakers to "be courageous" as she opened testimony at the first congressional hearing on gun violence since the Dec. 14 massacre in which a gunman shot dead 20 children and six adults at an elementary school in Newtown, Conn.

President Barack Obama has asked Congress to pass the largest package of gun restrictions in decades.

RIM changes name, launches new phones

Research In Motion Ltd. unveiled the long-delayed line of smartphones it hopes will put it on the comeback trail yesterday but it disappointed investors by saying U.S. sales of its all-new BlackBerry 10 will start only in March.

Interview

Is your cat a mass murderer?

Little Tiddles is fluffy, adorable ... and murderous. A shocking report from the Smithsonian Conservation Biology Institute found that cats kill far more animals than was previously believed — a potentially genocidal four billion birds and 20 billion mammals a year in the U.S. alone. We spoke to lead researcher Dr. Scott Lost.

This guy?

Which cats are the biggest killers and why?

We estimate that un-owned cats including barn cats, stray cats, cats in subsidized colonies and cats that are completely feral are responsible for 69% of bird mortality and 89% of mammal mortality. The predation rates by this group average three times greater than rates for owned cats.

How many kills might a pet cat make in a year?

The best available data suggests that a single owned cat kills between 4 and 18 birds and between 11 and 30 mammals per year. This is before accounting for prey items that cat owners and researchers are unable to detect, so the numbers are probably higher. Un-owned cats — because they spend their time outdoors — kill far more animals: 23-46 birds and 140-330 mammals per year, on average.

But we know cats are predators. Why worry?

In the United States there are no native predators that are comparable to domestic cats; thus, cats represent a novel predator and threat to wildlife. The data suggests that native bird and mammal species — as opposed to 'pests' — make up the majority of the species preyed upon by cats. More research is needed to determine which species are most vulnerable to cats, but these should be a wildlife management priority.

What steps could/should be taken to reduce the killing?

We hope that the large amount of wildlife mortality indicated by our research alerts policymakers, wildlife managers and scientists to the large magnitude of this problem. KIERON MONKS/MWN

Tahrir bodyguards fighting Egypt's sexual attackers

Two years on from Egypt's triumphant revolution, protests have returned to Cairo's Tahrir Square — and with them a plague of sexual assaults rising to a peak of 25 reported on Jan. 25. Now Egyptian women are fighting back through civil society groups determined to provide the protection that police have failed to deliver.

"We want to create safe space for women to protest," Salma, a founding member the group Tahrir Bodyguard, told Metro. "We have volunteers to patrol the square at the Friday demonstrations and if they see an attack they intervene and take the girl to safety."

The uniformed volunteers try to avoid confrontation, says Salma, but

"Public and media attitudes are beginning to change as people realize how traumatic these incidents are."

wear protective clothing and "accept that they will face violence." Volunteers have been beaten and stabbed in their efforts to disrupt attacks.

Tahrir Bodyguard was established spontaneously in December by a small group of female friends in response to the growing number of women refusing to attend protests for fear of sexual assault. They established a Twitter account for people to report assaults and were flooded with messages of support.

The group quickly expanded to 300 active volunteers, in alliance with similar groups such as Basma and Operation Anti-Sexual Harassment, and there are signs that such actions are having an impact — despite around 80% of Egyptians believing that assaults are the victim's fault, according to a recent survey. The group plans to launch courses in self-defense.

"It is making a difference because they refer cases to us for psychological and medical help," said Dr Farah Shash, lead researcher into violence against women at Cairo's El-Nadeem Center.

► Civil society groups aim to protect women while police fail to.

► A Tahrir Bodyguard goes on patrol in Tahrir Square.

No gov't support

Dr. Shash believes the government is resisting any progress. "We see a pattern to assaults and we know that it is organized. The assaults are systematic, on the same streets, with the same people. We can't say who exactly is behind them, but by refusing to take action the Ministry of Interior is implicitly supporting them." The Ministry could not be reached for comment.

Jason London: Dazed, confused and pooping

All of those Tiger Beat questionnaires that "Dazed and Confused" star Jason London had to fill out in the '90s never foresaw him crapping in the back seat of a cop car.

The former teen heartthrob got into a bit of a mess in Scottsdale, Ariz., on Saturday night after getting into a bar fight with some bouncers. According to the police report, cops were called and London was so nuts and shoving officers that he had to be subdued.

But it was in the back-seat of the cop car on the way to being booked where it gets sad/bad: En route to the station, London started throwing insults to the cops.

"I f—ing love this. I f—ing own you guys so hard," he reportedly yelled. "I'm rich and I'm a motherf—ing famous actor! F—ing look me up, bitch. It smells like s— in your car and your breath smells like diarrhea." The "rich and motherf—ing famous" actor then leaned to the left and pooped. London, not one to forget his theater training, then offered this zinger: "I told you I'm happy as s—."

London was eventually arrested for disorderly conduct/fighting and assault, and for realizing that you don't need to take similes literally.

Court. Date

► Lohan is back at it.

JB LACROIX/WIREIMAGE

Lohan back in court ... again

Lohan wore Chanel and a pair of Louboutins for her court case yesterday. The troubled starlet was in a Los Angeles courtroom to defend herself from charges of lying to police about driving a sports car that crashed into a dump truck in June. No sentencing happened, but the judge scheduled several future court dates for her. One bright side? It's almost been a complete year since she was last in court.

Judd files for divorce from husband

Ashley Judd and race car-driver husband Dario Franchitti have decided to call it quits, according to People magazine. "We have mutually decided to end our marriage," the ex-couple said in a statement. "We'll always be family and continue to cherish our relationship based on the special love, integrity and respect we have always enjoyed." Judd and Franchitti were married for 11 years before their split.

Talking points

Baldwin to be a dad again?

Alec Baldwin may be preparing for fatherhood again, according to reports from In Touch. Sources tell the magazine that Baldwin's wife, Hilaria Thomas, is pregnant. But Baldwin's reps are eager to put such claims to rest. "When and if [Alec and Hilaria Baldwin] have news they want to share, they will share it," the reps posted via Twitter. "Until then, we have no comment."

► Thomas and Baldwin

Styles' pithy message

One Direction's Harry Styles is not one to turn down a request from a fan, even if that fan happens to be the daughter of a paparazzo. A London photographer recently pressed the boy-bander for an autograph for his daughter, Ella, and Styles was happy to oblige. His message: "Dear Ella, Please tell your daddy to go away. Love from Harry x"

Cooper and Swift: Not gonna happen

A recent report from Radar Online has Jennifer

Lawrence attempting to introduce her "Silver Linings Playbook" co-star, Bradley Cooper, to pal Taylor Swift. "It was a little awkward for Bradley. Jennifer came to him and told him that Taylor was interested in getting together. He had to decline, knowing that Jennifer and Taylor are friends," a source says. But the actor insists to Extra that it's a load of nonsense. "That's completely made up," he says.

► On 'Do No Harm,' a doctor battles his double personality:
A psychopath who takes over his body every night

The killer

There's a new high-concept split-personality thriller on the block: NBC's "Do No Harm," starring Steven Pasquale as the successful neurosurgeon Jason and the destructive psychopath Ian, who takes over Jason's body between 8:25 p.m. and 8:25 a.m. Of course, it's not the first show in recent memory to try out the double life concept, including NBC's "My Own Worst Enemy" in 2008 and "Awake" last year, neither of which made it out to a second season.

But the folks behind "Do No Harm" are heading into tonight's premiere (10 p.m., NBC) with confidence. "I think that ultimately you can only write the show you want to watch, and this was a show that I wanted to see on TV," says executive producer David Schulner. "But definitely I took lessons from those shows, and I said this is going to be a show you're going to want to watch every single week. The stuff that Ian does to Jason and Jason will do to Ian, it's a wild roller-coaster ride, and it's just thrilling and fun. That's the big difference between those shows."

That thrilling fun comes mostly from the ways in which Ian goes wild with Jason's life while his more mild-mannered counterpart sleeps. "Ian's a little bit like a cat. The cat wants to play with that mouse. He doesn't want to kill it, because what fun would that be?" Schulner says. "So Ian's going to do a lot of stuff to Jason. And then what's great about Jason is he's just as smart as Ian is and is sometimes two steps ahead, so there are traps in place."

It's more than just a game, however, when Ian takes over. "There's a true danger to him," Schulner says. "He's truly menacing, and that's why Jason needs to get rid of him."

For Pasquale, that makes for a fascinating acting challenge. But at least he knows both characters' fates are safe. "Ian's aware that if he were ever to murder somebody, they would [both] go to jail," Pasquale says, while stressing: "It really is a very real threat of something going very dark. Whether or not it happens will remain to be seen, but certainly that's where all of the tension lies."

Krakowski talks '30 Rock' series finale

▶ Star promises the sitcom will go out in true 'wacky style'

When we met up with Jane Krakowski at a Bank of America event over the holidays, the star — who plays the excitable Jenna Maroney on "30 Rock" — had just four days of filming left on the NBC sitcom. She filled us in on those final days on set, and what we can expect from tonight's series finale.

▶ Her final table read wasn't easy: "It was tearful. Everyone was a little choked up because we actually acknowledge the show within the show ending, so it kind of brought it all home for us. We'd kind of been living like, 'Yeah, I guess it's gonna end in a few episodes,' and suddenly we're here. But I think the writers did a great job finishing the characters the way you want them to, and, of course, in true '30 Rock' wacky style."

▶ Could her character get any wackier? [Laughs] "I don't know if that's even possible, but I am going to miss playing her. I mean, she's so over-the-top and high above the line of reality. Every scene we do now, I realize I'm never going to get to play this kind of out-there stuff again. I'm gonna miss it."

▶ Why ending the show is so bittersweet: "I think it's a mixed bag of emotions. I'm excited to see what's next. I'm going to miss everybody terribly. It's just been such a great group of people, and I think that

On saying goodbye:

"It's going to be hard. There's about 300 people who work on our show, and so to say goodbye to each and every one of them — there will be days when you're walking on set and pass someone and you get really emotional. You think, 'Oh, I didn't realize, I'm gonna miss that guy' — those people that you see every single day."

The souvenir

she's keeping

▶ "I like to say stealing is a crime and I will not be partaking in any of that. I think Tina's taking the sign that says 'The Girlie Show' before it was 'TGS' that Jenna destroyed by throwing something at, so it's kind of broken and she's taking it as it is. I don't know; I'll certainly take away all my good memories."

everyone on the show knows that this is as good as it gets. I think we're all really proud of what we made and that we've made it on the air this long — it's a lot longer than we expected."

▶ Why Ice-T is in the finale: "There is a 'Law & Order' reference. Coco was there — I think Coco's always with him. They're a sweet couple. Everyone on the set was very excited that Coco came, too."

The Vaccines can't solve everything

► What did you expect? ► Singer Justin Young on how not even his band's great 'Come of Age' album will fix all of the world's evils

The first refrain a listener will hear on The Vaccines' sophomore album is Justin Young, singing in a snotty punk voice, "I don't really care about anybody else when I haven't got my own life figured out." This admission seems curious for a band who seem to have found their footing and are arguably living up to their latest album's title, "The Vaccines Come of Age." But Young says coming of age is not without its growing pains, and these lyrics ring true for him.

"It's just about being in your 20s, and it's a very weird time because you're expected to know who you are and where you want to go and how you want to get there, and I guess not everybody really does," he says. "It's weird, because I have friends who are the same age and some of them are parents, while some of them still live with their parents. And this is the first time in your life where you realize that you and your friends are at different points on the path."

The path has been a scenic one, if not a bit of a blur, for the past few years for Young and his cohorts, guitarist Freddie Cowan, bassist Arni Arnason and drummer Pete Robertson. A great debut in 2011 ("What Did You Expect from The Vaccines?") led to the young British band getting on opening slots for big bands, which turned into festival dates, which turned into international headlining shows. Also in there were a handful of high profile collaborations (including ones with members of Franz Ferdinand and The Strokes), a series of show-postponing throat surgeries for Young (he had a polyp on his vocal cords) and a No. 1 album in England when "Come of Age" came out last fall.

"For us, it felt like a more accomplished record," says Young, "as it perhaps should and would in a year and a half later of having been playing together every night."

But even with the band chemistry continuing to ferment, there is still an agitation to these songs that give the album life.

"When you're a kid and you see these people in these bands, you think they're these perfect beings beamed down from space," says Young. "I definitely don't feel like a different person, but perhaps I'm expected to be. ... I think when you get into your mid-20s, you realize how big and bad the world is and no matter how much you cry over spilled milk, no one is gonna mop it up for you. The world is a cruel place and it's like realizing that."

But Young insists these are no spoiled rock star blues he's experiencing. He says it's almost the opposite: "We're incredibly lucky and we're doing everything we've ever wanted to do and we're happy, but it's like it doesn't matter what position you're put in, it still doesn't change you as a person. You can only ever find happiness within yourself."

sion of "Matthew Bourne's Swan Lake," a royal fantasy with a corps of fine-feathered fellows, and the aforementioned triplets in "To Dance Like a Man," a British documentary that reveals ballet life in Havana where dancers are superstars. Two French looks at American subjects are a 1971 interview with Busby Berkeley that excerpts some of his more astounding chorus-girl fantasy scenes, and "Merce Cunningham: A Legacy of Dance," which explores the career of the late master choreographer and the fate of his troupe in the years since his death.

A real sleeper is Andrew Garrison's "Trash Dance," which follows choreographer Allison Orr as she cajoles the sanitation workers of Austin, Texas — and their many fabulous trucks — into rehearsals and an outdoor performance. It succeeds despite driving rain and adds immeasurably to the workers' pleasure and pride. Another wonderful doc, "A Girl from Mexico," recounts the career of Carmen Gutierrez, the first Mexican dancer to perform on Broadway (for Jerome Robbins), who later became a fashion designer in New York. Japanese, Finnish and Spanish dancers are celebrated, along with Paul Taylor and Shirley Clarke.

2 'Bullet to the Head': Based on the French novel "Du Plomb Dans La Tete," this epic action film takes you on a mental roller-coaster ride through the tough streets of New Orleans and stars Sylvester Stallone.

3 'Hansel and Gretel: Witch Hunters': Gemma Arterton and Jeremy Renner are the bounty-hunting, witch-slaying sibling team.

4 'Movie 43': The Farrelly Brothers helm this multi-director, star-studded comedy made up of many vignettes and tied together with the quest of three teenagers to find the most taboo movie ever made.

5 'Parker': Whoa, Jason Statham as a bad-ass action hero? What a change of pace! This time, Jennifer Lopez contributes some very attractive set dressing. ● METRO

It's usually a bumpy road

Disrespectful behavior that makes you feel devalued requires other considerations. But if it is just a matter of dealing with your differences, despite the few bumps they might generate, it doesn't have to mean the end of the journey. The goal is not to eradicate the disappointments, but to learn how to handle them, work through them and move on. No partner is perfect, probably not even Ryan, so you want to be equipped to face the let-downs without letting the whole thing fall apart.

Shrink Wrap

DR. JANE GREER

LETTERS@METRO.US

From the outside, Ryan Gosling probably seems like a flawless boyfriend — there's certainly no denying that he's a handsome star. But maintaining a relationship, as he and Eva Mendes have done for well over a year, requires so much more than that. We all want the ideal relationship with the best partner, right? In our minds that person is very clear: always thoughtful and tuned in to our needs. So when you are dating someone and he or she doesn't act like that, do you immediately assume that person isn't right for you? Or might he or she be worth a little more time and effort? More importantly, how can you make the distinction?

When it comes to your partner, many people's notion is: "If you loved me, you would ..." If you loved me, you would be willing to spend Saturday with my parents. If you loved me, you would agree to eat vegetarian. If you loved me, you would shave every day because I ask you to. In fact, it sums up so much about our expectations that "If You Loved Me You Would" is a whole chapter in my book "What About Me?" The problem is, when your partner doesn't do these things, it seems like he or she is being selfish and purposefully disappointing you. That is not always the case at all. In fact, often your partner's choices are more about his or her own preferences and not a measure of their love for you. It is the act of placing your judgment on those actions that puts the negative spin on them.

We all come at things from a varied perspective, and much of that has to do with the families we grew up in. It might seem perfectly natural to spend every Saturday with your parents, but he is used to seeing his own parents twice a year. Or, you might want to stop eating meat for one reason or another, but she loves meat — and that has nothing to do with how she feels about you.

"When it comes to your partner, many people's notion is: 'If you loved me you would ...' The problem is, when your partner doesn't do these things it seems like they are being selfish and purposefully disappointing you. That is not always the case at all." GREER

Horoscope

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Even if the behavior of someone you like proves to be frustrating, you'll have the good judgment to cope with it philosophically — without damaging the relationship.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Although you'll have the ability to size up situations accurately, there's a chance that you will do something that won't serve your best interest. Use your common sense.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Even if you are luckier than usual in certain material matters, remember: Your good fortune has its limit.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Your chances for achieving an important objective look good, provided you play it cool. If you're too visible, competitors might shoot you down.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. A social event that you aren't eager to join could turn out to be enjoyable. The problem won't be with the affair — it's likely to be with you.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Success is likely in a joint endeavor if you handle things correctly. The problem will come from the distribution of rewards; be sure everyone involved is treated properly.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Reason rather than force must be used in all testy developments with which you might have to contend. Make certain your logic wins out over your impulses.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. It's important that you have a voice in all matters that could cost you out of pocket. This is one area where others should not be allowed to make decisions for you.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Think of yourself as part of a team in all of your involvements with friends, and strive to be cooperative.

If you are self-serving, you'll stick out like a sore thumb.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Provided you don't go off on tangents, you will be extremely adept at fulfilling your ambitious objectives. Waste your energies on side issues, however, and you won't reach your goals.

Second Amendment protects right to bear arms

Yes, the Second Amendment applies to armies and militias for the purpose of defending against invasion and insurrection. However, it also allows individuals to protect themselves against thugs and tyrannical governments. There is no record of the founders viewing a "well regulated Militia" as only state militias, but rather the sum of individuals in a state who choose to create a militia. "The right of the people" in the Constitution is always in reference to individuals, not to some state entity.

And the Oscar for best performance by a political party "pretending" to work in the best interests of the people of the United States goes to ... once again ... the GOP!!!! Accepting on the behalf of the GOP are the three stooges — John Boehner, Mitch

McConnell and Eric Cantor. ROBERT LA ROSA, VIA EMAIL

Gun advocates undermine views

RE: GIVE ME LIBERTY, NOT MORE GOVERNMENT (METRO, JAN. 29) It's looking like the First Amendment might not be so kind to Second Amendment fanatics like John E. Bevan. The more opportunity people like Mr. Bevan take to express themselves freely about guns and their bizarre conception of liberty, the more they undermine the image of the sane, responsible gun owner that groups like the NRA are trying to promulgate. For Mr. Bevan, and many like him, it is CLEARLY the case that the government is out of control and that they are armed and ready to fight this tyranny that exists strictly in their imaginations. But for the rest of us, their childish comic book fantasy of armed insurrection against Obama's storm troopers smacks of delusional paranoia and dances close to the line of treason and sedition. And of course, he concludes with the "cold, dead hands" threat. The cold, dead hands, my friend, belong to a classroom full of innocent first-graders. ROBERT TROMBETTA, VIA EMAIL

- Cary Ann Hearst and Michael Trent take on the form of Shovels & Rope
 ► The couple discuss keeping the chemistry onstage and in the van

WONDER TWIN POWERS, ACTIVATE

Husband and wife team Cary Ann Hearst and Michael Trent have spent the last five years in their van. The Charleston, S.C. couple, who perform rousing country folk under the moniker of Shovels & Rope, insist that they wouldn't have it any other way.

"We knew that we wanted to be on the road together and not separately," says Hearst.

The telepathic connection that they share as musicians carries through into their personal relationship. "We call each other the Wonder Twins," says Hearst. "We can tell who is struggling or what they are struggling with at that moment without really talking about it."

The hard work and harmony (both on and off the stage) has been paying off lately. In August, they were playing small clubs and this week they hit "Late Night with David Letterman" on Wednesday, followed by a string of bigger-venue shows.

The key to this sudden success is their mid-2012 release "O' Be Joyful," the duo's first release as Shovels & Rope (their 2008 debut was released under their full names with "Shovels & Rope" as the title) and a lo-fi country gem ripe for discovery.

As for their charmingly rough-shod arrangements, immortalized in the lyrics of their stomping barn-burner "Birmingham" (where the two sing of "making something out of nothing" with "two old guitars like a shovel and rope"), Hearst demurely says that it was fate, not choice, that led them down the minimalist path.

"[The arrangements] had done the trick for us in the bars," says Hearst. "We try to make the it exciting using whatever our four arms and four legs and voices can do."

'O' Be Joyful' in all things

Trent contends that the limitations of having just two musicians keeps things fun.

"Sometimes all of our stuff breaks and all we have is our voices and a shaker.

Sometimes that's the best part of the show," he says.

This electric looseness Trent describes is what makes the audience sometimes feel like Shovels & Rope are making it up as they go along. And in a sense, they are.

"There's a lot of thought that goes into [our music] when we are riding around, but we don't really have a lot of chance to rehearse it until we are on the stage."

Upping the steaks

Hot Chef

French-born Laurent Tourondel knows New Yorkers love steak — but he also knows that's not the only food they crave. So when he opened his newest restaurant, the buzz-worthy Arlington Club steakhouse, he made sure the menu had a large selection of New Yorkers' other favorite food: sushi. And the Asian influence doesn't stop there: He's also offering dishes like Osaka-style spicy tuna and a Japanese spin on lobster salad, in addition to classic New York sirloins and rib-eye bone-ins. Tourondel is manning the kitchen at Arlington Club while overseeing 13 other restaurants around the world.

many restaurants! How do you make sure your vision and standards are carried out at all of them?

I go every day to a restaurant. Not each one, because they're not all in New York and I live in New York. I make sure the food quality is in line. There's always something to do — a brunch menu, Valentine's, always something I do.

Do you like to cook when you're not working?

Yeah. I grill a lot. I like to grill fish, actually. I don't do the same fish all the time, always I try to do something different. I go with something from the day, some random thing.

What are you liking these days?

I like swordfish.

Why is sushi such a large component of this menu?

Well I think it's well-received by the customers. People eat a lot of sushi. I think of sushi as maybe a lighter option than a steak. When I moved to the United States I'd seen it's a big thing, especially in New York. I've been living in New York for a long time, so it was really something I learned and studied.

Lopez named All-Star Game replacement

NBA. Many felt Brook Lopez was snubbed last Thursday when the reserves for the All-Star Game were revealed and he was not included.

For the Nets and their fans, that problem was rectified when Commissioner David Stern announced Lopez would replace injured Boston point guard Rajon Rondo on the Eastern Conference team.

"It's a huge honor," Lopez said in a statement. "First and foremost, I couldn't have done it without my teammates. They make my job a hundred times easier, playing with Deron [Williams], Joe [Johnson], Gerald [Wallace]. They gift-wrap me buckets and take a lot of attention away from me on the court. It is something I have been waiting for, and it's been a goal of mine and it will definitely be an exciting weekend."

Rondo was voted by the fans to be the starting point guard Feb. 17 in Houston but will miss the remainder of the season with a torn ACL.

Yankees look at signing Hafner

The Yankees are looking at going into spring training with no clear-cut designated hitter. But that could change if they sign free agent Travis Hafner.

Multiple outlets indicate the Yankees are pursuing the former Indians star as a possible replacement for the departed Raul Ibanez.

Hafner, 35, has played off and on for the past five seasons with Cleveland due to a multitude of injuries. He played just 66 games in 2012 as he dealt with knee and back injuries. He hit .228 with a .346 on-base percentage, 12 home runs and 34 RBIs.

Hafner appeared to be developing into one of the biggest stars in baseball in the mid-2000s before falling prey to the injury bug.

From 2003 to 2005, he hit 103 homers with a .308 average and twice finished in the top 10 in MVP voting. ● METRO

NOW OFF THE SHELF

Fantasy seasons crippled by injuries aren't limited to football. Our hoops campaigns can be decimated as well.

Top hoops adds

1 Eric Bledsoe, PG, Clippers — Chris Paul's knee injury appears more serious than the team has let on. Bledsoe is flashing starting-caliber talent.

2 Avery Bradley, SG, Celtics — Rajon Rondo's absence opens up a massive hole in the backcourt.

Owners of Kevin Love and Rajon Rondo already know this. But due to the length of an NBA season, there's a flip side here. Some players can come back and help us in a big way — as Andrew Bogut is proving:

Saving Sixers

Andrew Bynum (knee) has ditched strip clubs and bowling alleys for on-court work. He's expected to make his long-awaited debut shortly after the All-Star break. Although he'll be on plenty of restrictions, Bynum will immediately step in as the East's best center, will be counted on as the Sixers' savior and is in a contract year.

▶ Andrew Bynum's hotly anticipated return is finally on the horizon.

On the Grange

Danny Granger's knee injury cost him most of the season and his role as the Pacers' go-to guy. Still, he's one of the league's premier 3-point shooters and will still give defensive stats. Expect Granger back on the floor in some capacity by early March.

Soft as Bargs

Andrea Bargnani was falling out of favor in Toronto even before he went down with an elbow injury. But he's still a former No. 1 overall pick that can help his team and fantasy teams with his shooting touch. A trade out of Toronto? Even better.
